Communities across the nation, including the State of California, initiated Shelter in Place Orders that encouraged non-essential workers to shelter in their homes, and that shut down all non-essential businesses. The Shelter-in-Place Orders resulted in K-12 grade schools and colleges/universities to shut-downs and conduct learning through an online medium. The shutdowns impacted non-essential services and resulted in record unemployment. Individuals and households need assistance in paying their monthly services during the shelter-in-place order so that their students can continue their education online.
