Food Truck Festival Raises Prom Money for Needy Students

Hundreds of people came out to Val Verde High School in Perris on March 18 to take part in the campus' first food truck festival to raise money so underprivileged students could attend their prom.

Customers bought mocha lattes, gourmet burgers, wraps, homemade cupcakes and of course, stopped by the "Baconmania" truck.

With vegan wrap in hand, Perris City Councilman Julio Rodriguez stands between Socorro Nunez, registrar at Val Verde High School, and Gary Avants, the campus' ASB director, during a Food Truck Festival on March 18 to raise money so students could attend their senior prom.

Perris City Councilman Julio Rodriguez and City Manager Richard Belmudez were among those who purchased food to support the fund-raiser.

Rodriguez said he was "super-excited to support this event because it is a great community event for a great cause—helping deserving students raise money to go to their senior prom."

Perris staff members Rebecca Miranda and Sara Cortes de-Pavon, along with City Manager Richard Belmudez and City Councilman Julio Rodriguez dropped by the Food Truck Festival at Val Verde High School on March 18.
